COURSE INFORMATION

A confession must either admit in terms the offence, or at any rate substantially all the facts which constitute the offence. An admission of a gravely incriminating fact, even a conclusively incriminating fact is not in itself a confession. Understandable? Not as easy as it seems. However, admission and confession making up a very large part of the Indian Evidence Act, it is vital to understand its mechanism and working, along with identifying the underlying differences between the two. We at The LAW Learners strive to make our takers get a clear understanding and idea of How the two concepts run, their applicability, importance and differences while reading the Indian Evidence Act, from the perspective of a Law Student or a member of Legal Fraternity. The Course shall help you understand,

- What are Admission and Confession under Evidence Law?
- What is the difference between both?
- What are the evidentiary value attached to them?
- Are Confessions admissible?
- View of the Apex Court
