COURSE DETAILS

Imagine a situation involving mass violation of one's right by the conduct of the other party. What would the plaintiff do? Does he have the time to run through nitty gritty of law and get a long suit filed, which may result in his favour or against after say 10 long years? The answer is a Simple NO. He shall, by all means attempt to get a TEMPORARY INJUNCTION on the act of the other party, till the time his suit is fully settled. Temporary Injunction refers to restraint. A temporary injunction is an order by which a party to an action is required to do, or refrain from doing, a particular thing until the suit is disposed of or until further orders of the court. A temporary injunction is interim in nature, granted on an interlocutory application of the plaintiff.

The Course shall further deal with the provisions involved with regard to appeal under the Civil Procedure Code? When can an appeal be filed? What is the timeline? Who can file an appeal? What relief can a court give in an appeal suit? The Course shall discuss all these aspects.

The Course shall help you understand,

- The need to file an Interim Injunction application
- Reasoning behind interim injunctions
- Basic Provisions related to appeal
- Principles involved under Injunction and appeal

- View of the Apex Court
