COURSE INFORMATION

International Law also known as “Law of Nations” or “Public International Law”, is the name of a body of rules which regulate the conduct of sovereign states in their relations with one another. Sources of Public International Law include treaties, international customs, general principles of law as recognised by civilized nations, the decisions of national and lower courts, and scholarly writings. The term “sources of Public International Law” is used to mean two things: first, the actual materials determining the rules applicable to a given international situation (the material sources), and second, the legal methods creating rules of general application (the formal sources).

We at The LAW Learners present this course in order to develop a better understanding with respect to the sources of Public International Law, for it being possessing ample potential for future legal scenario.

The Course shall help you understand,

- How Public International law came into place?
- What constitutes PIL?
- What are the sources of PIL and how they are governed.
